orcas or killer whales are one of the planet s supreme predators alongside humans they have the most complex brains to be found in nature but while one of these two species has killed 200 million members of its own kind in the twentieth century alone the other has killed none this is where jeffrey masson s fascinating new book begins there is something different about humans masson has shown us that animals can teach us much about our own emotions about love dogs contentment cats and grief elephants but they have much to teach us about the negative emotions such as anger and aggression as well and in unexpected ways in beasts he demonstrates that the violence we perceive in the wild is mostly a matter of projection we link the basest human behaviour to animals to beasts and claim the high ground for our species we are least human we think when we succumb to our primitive animal instincts in fact nothing could be further from the truth animal predators kill to survive but there is nothing in the annals of animal aggression remotely equivalent to the violence mankind has inflicted upon itself humans and humans in our modern industrialised world in particular are the most violent species in existence we lack what all other animals have a check on aggression that serves the species rather than destroys it and it is here that animals have something vitally important to teach us about ourselves this book is a study of selected texts of british writings on indian wildlife published between 1860 and 1960 set in the context of british colonial rule in india this book also reflects on similar situations across the british empire and other colonial empires the destruction of wildlife in the making of empires is a subject not yet fully explored in scholarship this book aims to speak to global concerns regarding the extinction of several species and shows that the crisis has international roots the inhuman empire breaks new grounds as it juxtaposes colonial narratives to folk narratives these two types of narratives treat nonhuman animals very differently folk narrative considers them sentient beings while colonial narratives see them as game and do not care for their sentience both types of narratives are further evaluated with reference to the contemporary position of natural sciences regarding animal sentience and of anthropologists and philosophers regarding the relationship between nature and culture analyzing colonial accounts of hunting the author looks at the pain and suffering of nonhuman animals and combines statistics alongside narratives of british writers indian populace and nonhuman animals in order to show narratives reflect and impact reality this book will be of great value to those interested in animal studies folkloristics the history of colonialism and india sign up here for the table talk on sadhana naithani s book indian animal studies collective table talk ep 37 mailchi mp
