the beer of today brewed from malted grain and hops manufactured by large and often multinational corporations frequently associated with young adults sports and drunkenness is largely the result of scientific and industrial developments of the nineteenth century modern beer however has little in common with the drink that carried that name through the middle ages and renaissance looking at a time when beer was often a nutritional necessity was sometimes used as medicine could be flavored with everything from the bark of fir trees to thyme and fresh eggs and was consumed by men women and children alike beer in the middle ages and the renaissance presents an extraordinarily detailed history of the business art and governance of brewing during the medieval and early modern periods beer was as much a daily necessity as a source of inebriation and amusement it was the beverage of choice of urban populations that lacked access to secure sources of potable water a commodity of economic as well as social importance a safe drink for daily consumption that was less expensive than wine and a major source of tax revenue for the state in beer in the middle ages and the renaissance richard w unger has written an encompassing study of beer as both a product and an economic force in europe drawing from archives in the low countries and england to assemble an impressively complete history unger describes the transformation of the industry from small scale production that was a basic part of housewifery to a highly regulated commercial enterprise dominated by the wealthy and overseen by government authorities looking at the intersecting technological economic cultural and political changes that influenced the transformation of brewing over centuries he traces how improvements in technology and in the distribution of information combined to standardize quality showing how the process of urbanization created the concentrated markets essential for commercial production weaving together the stories of prosperous businessmen skilled brewmasters and small producers this impressively researched overview of the social and cultural practices that surrounded the beer industry is rich in implication for the history of the period as a whole this volume is the first publication to draw upon the mass of information provided by the historic towns atlases in order to explore comparative questions in medieval urban history the volume addresses the wider question of comparative urban studies the processes that determined the morphological formation of towns and the symbolic meaning of large scale town plans in their cultural context this open access book examines more than two centuries of societal development using novel historical and statistical approaches it applies the well being monitor developed by statistics netherlands that has been endorsed by a significant part of the international statistical community it features the netherlands as a case study which is an especially interesting example although it was one of the world's richest countries around 1850 extreme poverty and inequality were significant problems of well being at the time monitors of 1850 1910 1970 and 2015 depict the changes in three dimensions of well being the quality of life here and now later and elsewhere the analysis of two centuries shows the solutions to the extreme poverty problem and the appearance of new sustainability problems especially in domestic and foreign ecological systems the study also reveals the importance of natural capital soil air water and subsoil resources showing their relation with the social structure of the here and now treatment and trade of natural resources also impacted on the quality of life later and elsewhere further the book illustrates the role of natural capital by dividing the capital into three types of raw materials and concomitant material flows bio raw materials mineral and fossil subsoil resources additionally the analysis of the institutional context identifies the key roles of social groups in well being development the book ends with an assessment of the solutions and barriers offered by the historical anchoring of the well being and sustainability issues this unique analysis of well being and sustainability and its institutional analysis appeals to historians statisticians and policy makers five essays address such themes as the relationship between feminist history and women's history the use of the concept of experience the development of the history of gender demographic history and women's history and the importance of post structuralism to women's history much modern le post 17s0 economic history is concerned with success in that a vast body of literature focuses its attention upon the experience of industrialisation and economic growth or upon relative differences in performance once the growth process is underway the explanations advanced frequently hinge on those supply and demand factors perceptible during the growth period itself which may have helped or hindered economic progress the problem which arises with this approach is whether those forces attributed with having pulled a country forward were the same as those which in their absence had held it back for example the growth of inter national demand may be seen as a major stimulus in the economic development of a particular country but its effectiveness as a stimulant may have been contingent upon the prior removal of quite different obstacles to growth in these circumstances it would be quite wrong to attribute lack of earlier development to the absence of international demand thus the study of a period preceeding discernible growth in a sector of the economy may tell historians as much about the reasons for subsequent growth as a study of the growth period itself this was my initial reason for choosing to research into the industrial development in the netherlands in the first half of the nineteenth century that it was an interval in economic history usually interpreted as one of stagnation of missed opportunities and even of economic decline this volume explores various aspects of developments in public facilities in the early modern low countries the low countries are an excellent case study for this purpose because of high levels of urbanization and the relevant comparison between the north and the south of the netherlands book jacket marine insurance has been of great importance to the expansion of long distance trade and economic growth in the early modern period in particular for seafaring nations such as the dutch republic the amsterdam market became europe's leading insurance market and within the republic other insurance systems also emerged little is known about the differing institutional frameworks governing these industries and the interaction between the institutions and the actors in the industry this study examines the development of marine insurance in the netherlands in amsterdam rotterdam and the province of groningen from c 1600 to 1870 from an institutional point of view it examines how the behavior of authorities insurers underwriters and brokers was affected by the formal and informal constraints of the industry and how in turn their conduct has influenced the institutional framework and induced institutional change three insurance systems in the netherlands each with its own distinctive characteristics and the interaction between institutions and actors is examined by examining developments over a period of two and half centuries the path of long term institutional change becomes discernable
