how the definition production and leveraging of information are shaped by caste class and gender and the implications for development information says janaki srinivasan has fundamentally reshaped development discourse and practice in this study she examines the history of the idea of information and its political implications for poverty alleviation she presents three cases in india the circulation of price information in a fish market in kerala government information in information kiosks operated by a nonprofit in puducherry and a political campaign demanding a right to information in rajasthan to explore three uses of information to support goals of social change countering claims that information is naturally and universally empowering srinivasan shows how the definition production and leveraging of information are shaped by caste class and gender srinivasan draws on archival and ethnographic research to challenge the idea of information as objective and factual using the concept of an information order she examines how the meaning and value of information reflect the social relations in which it is embedded she asks why casting information as a tool of development and solution to poverty appeals to actors across the political spectrum she also shows how the power to label some things information and others not is at least as significant as the capacity to subsequently produce access and leverage information the more faith we place in what information can do she cautions the less attention we pay to its political lives and to the role of specific social structures individual agency and material form in the defining production and use of that information
