this monograph examines truth in fiction by applying the techniques of a naturalized logic of human cognitive practices the author structures his project around two focal questions what would it take to write a book about truth in literary discourse with reasonable promise of getting it right what would it take to write a book about truth in fiction as true to the facts of lived literary experience as objectivity allows it is argued that the most semantically distinctive feature of the sentences of fiction is that they areunambiguously true and false together it is true that sherlock holmes lived at 221b baker street and also concurrently false that he did a second distinctive feature of fiction is that the reader at large knows of this inconsistency and isn t in the least cognitively molested by it why it is asked would this be so what would explain it two answers are developed according to the no contradiction thesis the semantically tangled sentences of fiction are indeed logically inconsistent but not logically contradictory according to the no bother thesis if the inconsistencies of fiction were contradictory a properly contrived logic for the rational management of inconsistency would explain why readers at large are not thrown off cognitive stride by their embrace of those contradictions as developed here the account of fiction suggests the presence of an underlying three or four valued dialethic logic the author shows this to be a mistaken impression there are only two truth values in his logic of fiction the naturalized logic of truth in fiction jettisons some of the standard assumptions and analytical tools of contemporary philosophy chiefly because the neurotypical linguistic and cognitive behaviour of humanity at large is at variance with them using the resources of a causal response epistemology in tandem with the naturalized logic the theory produced here is data driven empirically sensitive and open to a circumspect collaboration with the empirical sciences of language and cognition this book addresses how our revisionary practices account for relations between texts and how they are read it offers an overarching philosophy of revision concerning works of fiction fact and faith revealing unexpected insights about the philosophy of language the metaphysics of fact and fiction and the history and philosophy of science and religion using the novels of j r r tolkien as exemplars the authors introduce a fundamental distinction between the purely physical and the linguistic aspects of texts they then demonstrate how two competing theories of reference descriptivism and referentialism are instead constitutive of a single semantic account needed to explain all kinds of revision the authors also propose their own metaphysical foundations of fiction and fact the next part of the book brings the authors philosophy of revision into dialogue with thomas kuhn s famous analysis of factual and specifically scientific change it also discusses a complex episode in the history of paleontology demonstrating how scientific and popular texts can diverge over time finally the authors expand their philosophy of revision to religious texts arguing that rather than being distinct such texts are always read as other kinds that faith tends to be more important as evidence for religious texts than for others and that the latter explains why religious communities tend to have remarkable historical longevity revising fiction fact and faith offers a unique and comprehensive account of the philosophy of revision it will be of interest to a wide range of scholars and advanced students working in philosophy of language metaphysics philosophy of literature literary theory and criticism and history and philosophy of science and religion concerned with the nature of the medium and the borders between fact and fiction reflexivity was a ubiquitous feature of modernist and postmodernist literature and film while in the wake of the post postmodern return to the real cultural criticism has little time for discussions of reflexivity it remains a key topic in narratology as does fictionality the latter is commonly defined opposition to the real and the factual but remains conditioned by historical cultural discursive and medium related factors reflexivity blurs the boundaries between fact and fiction however by giving fiction a factual edge or by questioning the limits of factuality in non fictional discourses fictionality factuality and reflexivity thus constitute a complex triangle of concepts yet they are rarely considered together this volume fills this gap by exploring the intricacies of their interactions and interdependence in philosophy literature film and digital media providing insights into a broad range of their manifestations from the ancient times to today from east asia through europe to the americas
