the eighteenth century was the jews first modern century the deep changes that took place during its course shaped the following generations and its most prominent voices still reverberate today in this first volume of his magisterial work shmuel feiner charts the twisting and fascinating world of the first half of the 18th century from the viewpoint of the jews of europe paying careful attention to life stories to bright and dark experiences to voices of protest to aspirations of reform and to strivings for personal and general happiness feiner identifies the tectonic changes that were taking place in europe and their unprecedented effects on and among jews from the religious and cultural revolution of the haskalah jewish enlightenment to the question of whether jews could be citizens of any nation feiner presents a broad view of how this century of upheaval altered the map of europe and the jews who called it home in nineteenth century america gillian silverman contends reading and particularly book reading precipitated intense fantasies of communion in handling a book the reader imagined touching and being touched by the people affiliated with that book's narrative world an author a character a fellow reader this experience often led to a sense of consubstantiality a fantasy that the reader the material book and the imagined other were momentarily merged such a fantasy challenges psychological conceptions of discrete subjectivity along with the very notion of corporeal integrity the idea that we are detached skin bound and autonomously functioning entities it forces us to envision readers not as liberal subjects pursuing reading as a means toward privacy interiority and individuation but rather as communal beings inseparable from objects in our psychic and phenomenal world while theorists have long emphasized the way reading can promote a sense of abstract belonging bodies and books emphasizes the intense somatic bonds that nineteenth century subjects experienced while reading silverman bridges the gap between the cognitive and material effects of reading arguing that the two worked in tandem enabling readers to feel deep communion with objects both human and nonhuman in the external world drawing on the letters and diaries of nineteenth century readers along with literary works by herman melville frederick douglass susan warner and others silverman explores the book as a technology of intimacy and ponders what nineteenth century readers might be able to teach us two centuries later
