traditionally economists have based their economic predictions on the assumption that humans are super rational creatures using the information we are given efficiently and generally making selfish decisions that work well for us as individuals economists also assume that we re doing the very best we can possibly do not only for today but over our whole lifetimes too but increasingly the study of behavioural economics is revealing that our lives are not that simple instead our decisions are complicated by our own psychology each of us makes mistakes every day we don t always know what

s best for us and even if we do we might not have the self control to deliver on our best intentions we struggle to stay on diets to get enough exercise and to manage our money we misjudge risky situations we are prone to herding sometimes peer pressure leads us blindly to copy others around us other times copying others helps us to learn quickly about new unfamiliar situations this very short introduction explores the reasons why we make irrational decisions how we decide quickly why we make mistakes in risky situations our tendency to procrastination and how we are affected by social influences personality mood and emotions the implications of understanding the rationale for our own financial behaviour are huge behavioural economics could help policy makers to understand the people behind their policies enabling them to design more effective policies while at the same time we could find ourselves assaulted by increasingly savvy marketing michelle baddeley concludes by looking forward to see what the future of behavioural economics holds for us about the series the very short introductions series from oxford university press contains hundreds of titles in almost every subject area these pocket sized books are the perfect way to get ahead in a new subject quickly our expert authors combine facts analysis perspective new ideas and enthusiasm to make interesting and challenging topics highly readable as one of the most enduring and bitter struggles we have seen in over 100 years the israeli palestinian conflict is a powder keg always on the verge of exploding and drawing in the wider region the international community at large and in particular the u s although the conflict is of far reaching importance among college students and the general public there is a dearth of knowledge about it many of the conversations in these audiences are animated by ongoing myths and problematic talking points this book fills in the gaps of understanding while puncturing false dichotomies and tearing down walls of ideology or indifference it addresses perennial questions including when and why did the conflict start what exactly are the claims of the contending sides why does peace seem unattainable what is a likely long term outcome and how can it be brought about in a peaceful way doing justice to both sides finally this book maintains that historic palestine the land between the mediterranean and the jordan river must become a home for both palestinians and jews with equal standings for both and without exclusive claims for either for students scholars and citizens of the world this book provides a concise and level headed way to understand one of the most complex and vexing conflicts of our time
