when culture makes itself at home in motion where does an anthropologist stand clifford offers a new view of anthropology it is he says a moving picture of a world that reveals itself en route in this collage of essays meditations poems and travel reports clifford takes travel and translation as openings into a complex modernity

this book examines the works of four contemporary first generation chinese migrant writer artists in france françois cheng gao xingjian dai sijie and shan sa they were all born in china moved to france in their adulthood to pursue their literary and artistic ambitions and have enjoyed the highest french and western institutional recognitions from the grand prix de la francophonie to the nobel prize in literature they have established themselves not only as writers but also as translators calligraphers painters playwrights and filmmakers mainly in their host country french has become their dominant but not only language of literary creation except for gao yet linguistic idioms poetic imagery and classical thought from chinese cultural heritage permeate their french texts and visual artworks reflecting a strong translingual and transmedial sensibility the book provides not only distinctive literary and artistic examples beyond existing studies of intercultural encounter french postcolonial and chinese diasporic enquiries more importantly it formulates a theoretical model that captures the creative dynamics between the french francophone and chinese sinophone spaces of articulation thereby contributing to contemporary debates about literary and artistic production interpretation and circulation in the global development of comparative world literature as well as intermediality studies across the lines is a study of how language mediates experience across cultures with regard to travel the study is partly based on the books of various travel writers with no grasp of a foreign tongue their perceptions using interpreters guides the relationship between travel and translation might seem obvious at first but to study it in earnest is to discover that it is at once intriguing and elusive of course travelers translate in order to make sense of their new surroundings sometimes they must translate in order to put food on the table the relationship between these two human compulsions however goes much deeper than this what gets translated it seems is not merely the written or the spoken word but the very identity of the traveler these seventeen essays which treat not only such well known figures as martin luther erasmus shakespeare and milton but also such lesser known figures as konrad grünenberg leo africanus and garcilaso de la vega constitute the first survey of how this relationship manifests itself in the early modern period as such it should be of interest both to scholars who are studying theories of translation and to those who are studying hodieporics or travel and the literature of travel for centuries before its rebirth as a spoken language hebrew writing was like a magical ship in a bottle that gradually changed design but never voyaged out into the world isolated the ancient hebrew ship was torpid because the language of the bible was inadequate to represent modern life in europe early modern speakers of yiddish and german gave hebrew the breath of life when they translated dialogues descriptions and thought processes from their vernaculars into hebrew by narrating tales of pilgrimage and adventure jews pulled the ship out of the bottle and sent modern hebrew into the world in travels in translation frieden analyzes this emergence of modern hebrew literature after 1780 a time when jews were moving beyond their conventional torah and zion centered worldview enlightened authors diverged from pilgrimage narrative traditions and appropriated travel narratives to america the pacific and the arctic the effort to translate sea travel stories from european languages with their nautical terms wide horizons and exotic occurrences made particular demands on hebrew writers they had to overcome their tendency to introduce biblical phrases at every turn in order to develop a new vivid descriptive language as frieden explains through deft linguistic analysis by 1818 a radically new travel literature in hebrew had arisen authors such as moses mendelsohn frankfurt and mendel lefin published books that charted a new literary path through the world and in european history taking a fresh look at the origins of modern jewish literature frieden launches a new approach to literary studies one that lies at the intersection of translation studies and travel writing both travel and translation involve a type of journey one with literal and metaphorical dimensions judith johnston brings together these two richly resonant modes of getting from here to there as she explores their impact on culture with respect to the work of victorian women using the metaphor of the published journey whether it involves actual travel or translation johnston focusses particularly on the relationships of various british women with continental europe at the same time she sheds light on the possibility of appropriation and british imperial enhancement that such contact produces johnston s book is in part devoted to case studies of women such as sarah austin mary busk anna jameson charlotte guest jane sinnett and mary howitt who are representative of women travellers translators and journalists during a period when women became increasingly robust participants in the publishing industry whether they wrote about their own travels or translated the foreign language texts of other writers johnston shows women were establishing themselves as actors in the broad business of culture in widening our understanding of the ways in which gender and modernity functioned in the early decades of the victorian age johnston s book makes a strong case for a greater appreciation of the contributions nineteenth century women made to what is termed the knowledge empire this book examines how non fictional travel accounts were rewritten reshaped and reoriented in translation between 1750 and 1850 a period that saw a sudden surge in the genre s popularity it explores how these translations played a vital role in the transmission and circulation of knowledge about foreign peoples lands and customs in the enlightenment and romantic periods the collection makes an important contribution to travel writing studies by looking beyond metaphors of mobility and cultural transfer to focus specifically on what happens to travelogues in translation chapters range from discussing essential differences between the original and translated text to relations between authors and translators from intra european narratives of grand tour travel to scientific voyages round the world and from established male travellers and translators to their historically less visible female counterparts drawing on european travel writing in english french german spanish and portuguese the book charts how travelogues were selected for translation how they were reworked to acquire new aesthetic political or gendered identities and how they sometimes acquired a radically different character and content to meet the needs and expectations of an emergent international readership the contributors address aesthetic political and gendered aspects of travel writing in translation drawing productively on other disciplines and research areas that encompass aesthetics the history of science literary geography and the history of the book as a meaningful manifestation of how institutionalized the discipline has become the new handbook of translation studies is most welcome it joins the other signs of maturation such as summer schools the development of academic curricula historical surveys journals book series textbooks terminologies bibliographies and encyclopedias the hts aims at disseminating knowledge about translation and interpreting and providing easy access to a large range of topics traditions and methods to a relatively broad audience not only students who often adamantly prefer such user friendliness researchers and lecturers in translation studies translation interpreting professionals but also scholars and experts from other disciplines among which linguistics sociology history psychology in addition the hts addresses any of those with a professional or personal interest in the problems of translation interpreting localization editing etc such as communication specialists journalists literary critics editors public servants business managers intercultural organization specialists media specialists marketing professionals the usability accessibility and flexibility of the hts depend on the commitment of people who agree that translation studies does matter all users are therefore invited to share their feedback any questions remarks and suggestions for improvement can be sent to the editorial team at hts.kuleuven.be next to the book edition in printed and electronic pdf format hts is also available as an online resource connected with the translation studies bibliography for access to the handbook of translation studies online please visit benjamins.com/online/hts the connection between travel and translation is often evoked in contemporary critical theory both practices seen as metaphors of mobility and flux linked to globalized post modern society travel is a multiple activity encompassing temporary and voluntary displacement repeated movement exile economic migration diaspora places of origin are often plural and unstable in spite of the enduring appeal of traditional labels such as mother country or patrie the multiple interfaces between translation travel and migration are the focus of all contributions in this special issue starting from different points of view and using a variety of methodologies the authors raise fundamental questions about the way in which we perceive the link between language national or ethnic identity and individual voice topics range from the interaction between travel travel narratives and translation in early english representations of china to the special role played by interpreters in mediating the first contact between a literate and a non literate culture from the multiple functions and audiences addressed by contemporary romani literature and its translation to the political as well a cultural implications of translating popular music across the bosporus a number of the articles focus on detailed textual analysis covering the intersection between exile self translation and translanguaging in the work of manuel puig the uses and limitations of translation in the works of migrant authors or the impact on figurations of europe of experimental work embracing polylingualism collectively these contributions also underline the importance of a closer examination of our assumptions about who the translators and the interpreters are and what roles they play in our society the routledge handbook of translation history presents the first comprehensive state of the art overview of this multi faceted disciplinary area and serves both as an introduction to carrying out research into translation and interpreting history and as a key point of reference for some of its main theoretical and methodological issues interdisciplinary approaches and research themes the handbook brings together 30 eminent international scholars from a wide range of disciplinary backgrounds offering examples of the most innovative research while representing a wide range of approaches themes and cultural contexts the handbook is divided into four sections the first looks at some key methodological and theoretical approaches the second examines some of the key research areas that have developed an interdisciplinary dialogue with translation history the third looks at translation history from the perspective of specific cultural and religious perspectives and the fourth offers a selection of case studies on some of the key topics to have emerged in translation and interpreting history over the past 20 years this handbook is an indispensable resource for students and researchers of translation and interpreting history translation theory and related areas research on medieval and early modern travel literature has made great progress which now allows us to take the next step and to analyze the correlations between the individual and space throughout time which contributed essentially to identity formation in many different settings the contributors to this volume engage with a variety of pre modern texts images and other documents related to travel and the individual s self orientation in foreign lands and make an effort to determine the concept of identity within a spatial framework often determined by the meeting of various cultures moreover objects images and words can also travel and connect people from different worlds through books the volume thus brings together new scholarship focused on the interrelationship of travel space time and individuality which also includes of course women s movement through the larger world whether in concrete terms or through proxy travel via readings travel here is also examined with respect to craftsmen s activities at various sites artists employment for many different projects all over europe and elsewhere and in terms of metaphysical experiences catabasis the pre publication version of translating new york was awarded the 2017 northeast modern language association book award for the best unpublished book length manuscript on modern language literature the cultural production of spanish speaking new york is closely linked to the caribbean and to latin america at large but the city also plays a pivotal role in the work of a host of authors from the iberian peninsula writing in spanish catalan and english in many cases their new york city texts have marked their careers and the history of their national literatures drawing from a variety of genres translating new york recovers cultural narratives occluded by single linguistic or national literary histories and proposes that reading these texts through the lens of translation unveils new pathways of cultural circulation and influence looking beyond representations of the city's physical space translating new york suggests that travel to the city and contact with new york's multilingual setting ignited a heightened sensitivity towards both the verbal and non verbal languages of the city garnering literary achievement and aesthetic innovation analyzing the novels poetry and travel narratives of felipe alfau jos moreno villa julio camba and josep pla this book uncovers an international perspective of iberian literatures translating new york aims to rethink iberian literatures through the transatlantic travels of influential writers this is the first handbook to provide a comprehensive coverage of the main approaches that theorize translation and globalization offering a wide ranging selection of chapters dealing with substantive areas of research the handbook investigates the many ways in which translation both enables globalization and is inevitably transformed by it taking a genuinely interdisciplinary approach the authors are leading researchers drawn from the social sciences as well as from translation studies the chapters cover major areas of current interdisciplinary interest including climate change migration borders democracy and human rights as well as key topics in the discipline of translation studies this handbook also highlights the increasing significance of translation in the most pressing social economic and political issues of our time while accounting for the new technologies and practices that are currently deployed to cope with growing translation demands with five sections covering key concepts people culture economics and politics and a substantial introduction and conclusion this handbook is an indispensable resource for students and researchers of translation and globalization within translation and interpreting studies comparative literature sociology global studies cultural studies and related areas the first book length study focusing on robert lowell's career long preoccupation with the liberal mode of translational adaptation known as imitation robert lowell's imitations and the cold war argues that lowell's imitations are simultaneously symptomatic of and critically responsive to familiar nodes of cold war ideology such as containment and contamination secrecy and security post imperial u s expansion and empire it departs from studies focused solely on imitations 1961 lowell s book length collection of translational adaptations by demonstrating how imitation shadows lowell s work from his earliest collections land of unlikeness 1944 and lord weary s castle 1946 through his celebrated mid career collections life studies 1959 and for the union dead 1964 and to later works such as near the ocean 1969 and his contributions of adaptations from the russian of anna akhmatova and osip mandelstam collected in olga carlisle s anthology poets on street corners 1967 simon van schalkwyk excavates the imitational substrate undergirding and informing lowell s compositional method and poetic imagination throughout the course of his career in so doing he shows how imitation enacts at the level of form lowell s restless investment in cold war geopolitics and literary networks in ways that inform develop and complicate his more conventional canonization as an unquestionably american poet preoccupied solely and simplistically with personal or autobiographical modes of poetic confession as literary sites at which containment s dualities porosities leakages and contaminants are most clearly displayed lowell s imitations simultaneously challenge and develop our understanding of confession s presumably strict preoccupation with the personal regional and national frameworks through which lowell has commonly been understood over the past decade singularity has been a prominent term in a broad range of fields ranging from philosophy to literary and cultural studies to science and technology studies this volume intervenes in this broad discussion of singularity and its various implications proposing to explore the term for its specific potential in the study of literature singularity and transnational poetics brings together scholars working in the fields of literary and cultural studies translation studies and transnational literatures the volume s central concern is to explore singularity as a conceptual tool for the comparative study of contemporary literatures beyond national frameworks and by implication as a tool to analyze human existence contributors explore how singularity might move our conceptions of cultural identity from prevailing frameworks of self other toward the premises of being as singular plural through a close reading of transnational literatures from ireland germany the netherlands france and south africa this collection offers a new approach to reading literature that will challenge a reader s established notions of identity individuality communicability and social cohesion
