describes the challenges and difficulties of transforming a school into a multiple intelligences school and provides advice for educators in making significant changes to curriculum development and assessment

this book explores the many ways in which the obsession with being smart distorts the life of a typical college or university and how this obsession leads to a higher education that shortchanges the majority of students and by extension our society's need for an educated population the author calls on his colleagues in higher education to return the focus to the true mission of developing the potential of each student however smart they are when they get to college both the student and the college should be able to show what they learned while there unfortunately colleges and universities have embraced two very narrow definitions of smartness the course grade and especially the standardized test a large body of research shows that it will be very difficult for colleges to fulfill their stated mission unless they substantially broaden their conception to include student qualities such as leadership social responsibility honesty empathy and citizenship specifically the book grapples with issues such as the following why america's 3 000 plus colleges and universities have evolved into a hierarchical pecking order where institutions compete with each other to recruit smart students and where a handful of elite institutions at the top of the pecking order enroll the smartest students why higher education favors its smartest students to the point where the not so smart students get second class treatment why so many colleges find it difficult to make good on their commitment to affirmative action and equality of opportunity why college faculties tend to value being smart more than developing students smartness i.e. teaching and learning
