from random security checks at airports to the use of risk assessment in sentencing actuarial methods are being used more than ever to determine whom law enforcement officials target and punish and with the exception of racial profiling on our highways and streets most people favor these methods because they believe they re a more cost effective way to fight crime in against prediction bernard e harcourt challenges this growing reliance on actuarial methods these prediction tools he demonstrates may in fact increase the overall amount of crime in society depending on the relative responsiveness of the profiled populations to heightened security they may also aggravate the difficulties that minorities already have obtaining work education and a better quality of life thus perpetuating the pattern of criminal behavior ultimately harcourt shows how the perceived success of actuarial methods has begun to distort our very conception of just punishment and to obscure alternate visions of social order in place of the actuarial he proposes instead a turn to randomization in punishment and policing the presumption harcourt concludes should be against prediction until recently a handbook on neurosociology would have been viewed with skepticism by sociologists who have long been protective of their disciplinary domain against perceived encroachment by biology but a number of developments in the last decade or so have made sociologists more receptive to biological factors in sociology and social psychology much of this has been encouraged by the coeditors of this volume david franks and jonathan turner this new interest has been increased by the explosion of research in neuroscience on brain functioning and brain environment interaction via new mri technologies with implications for social and psychological functioning this handbook emphasizes the integration of perspectives within sociology as well as between fields in social neuroscience for example franks represents a social constructionist position following from g h mead s voluntaristic theory of the act while turner is more social structural and positivistic furthermore this handbook not only contains contributions from sociologists but leading figures from the psychological perspective of social neuroscience critical consciousness is the ability to critically analyse societal inequities and to develop the motivation and agency to promote social change while there has been a proliferation of empirical work on critical consciousness over the last two decades this is the first volume to consider how we can support youth s critical consciousness development their ability to recognize and fight injustice leading scholars address some of the field s most urgent questions how does critical consciousness develop what are the key developmental settings such as homes schools community programs and societal experiences racism policy brutality immigration political turmoil that inform critical consciousness development among youth providing novel insights into key school based out of school based and societal contexts that propel youth to greater critical reflection and action this book will benefit scholars and students in developmental educational and community psychology as well as practitioners working in schools community based organizations and other youth settings the united states has taken a long and winding road to racial equality especially as it pertains to relations between blacks and whites when barack hussein obama was elected as the forty fourth president of the united states and first black person to occupy the highest office in the land many wondered whether that road had finally come to an end do we now live in a post racial nation this volume contends that despite the election of the first black president and rise of a black american family as possibly the most recognized family the world over race is still a very salient issue particularly in the united states but the prominence of the obamas on the world stage and the positive image they project may hasten the day when america is indeed post racial even at the implicit level this book provides theoretical background and pastoral strategies for pastors lay leaders and congregation members to foster a restoration of the human dignity imputed by god and the good community god desires it addresses issues in pastoral care and pays particular attention to korean and korean american contexts some of the specific issues addressed include wisdom for common life chung yong as a theological and pastoral task tension between confucianism and feminism care of the abused and abusers in intimate violence ageism and elderly care racism and cultural identity of korean youth sexual ethics among korean young adults and depression and addiction among korean american youth and young adults all of the contributors have a strong background in clinical and or pastoral practices in addition to theoretical expertise in an era where the population is rapidly ageing this timely research handbook addresses the wide ranging social and legal issues concerning older people
