as we are about to enter upon the study of this book i want to say first a few things of an introductory character i suppose there is no portion of holy scripture that has meant more to the people of god particularly to tried and afflicted believers down through both the jewish and christian centuries than the book of psalms of course the worship expressed in this book does not rise to the full character of christian worship as in this present dispensation of the grace of god as we read the psalms we need to remember that when they were written our lord jesus had not yet become incarnate consequently redemption had not been effected and so the veil was still unrent god as it were was shut away from man and man was shut out from god and so the worshiper of old testament times gives expression to certain things that would not be suitable from the lips of an instructed worshiper in this present age of grace david prays take not thy holy spirit from me no well instructed christian would pray that today for we know now that we have received the holy spirit to abide with us forever we have been sealed by the holy spirit until the redemption of the purchased possession and then there are a great many of the prayers in the book of psalms that imply a hidden god but today god has come out into the light since our lord jesus by his sacrificial death upon the cross has rent the veil and opened up the way into the immediate presence of god for poor sinners and enabled god to come out to man in all the perfection of his glorious person thought experiments by ancient philosophers are often open to debate in what sense did their reasoning really concern thought experimentation for instance in plato s republic glaucon uses the myth of gyges to demonstrate why people who practice justice do so unwillingly a challenge posed to socrates and provided through some sort of thought experiment by imagining the effects of using the ring of invisibility was intended to answer the question of human nature and our basis for the inclination towards justice or injustice this collection expands the current but rare topic of whether it is possible to articulate a discussion about thought experiments and their arguments from the historical perspective of philosophy and science it may sometimes seem that in a loose sense any philosophical reflection can already be interpreted as some form of thought experiment although the functions of it are very diverse and complex and often closely linked to other cognitive tools such as visualization imagination or idealization the contributions in this book provide new insights into how the concept of a thought experiment coincides with more modern perceptions the purpose of the book is to show how philosophers already in antiquity began to use thought experiments and argumentation to convey theories in an accessible manner and how philosophical hypotheses often being subjective and impossible to prove through empirical evidence helped to promote scientific knowledge and discoveries different authors develop several lines of argumentation claiming that philosophical thinking can be understood by comparing it to scientific experimenting or vice versa if empirical evidence is usually necessary for science thought experiments may be used to develop a hypothesis or to prepare for experimentation the analysis of historical examples of thought experiments might also contribute to a better understanding of philosophical endeavour in antiquity as a whole
