this book presents a holistic overview of the work of renowned psychologist carl rogers known for developing the person centered approach it positions rogers humanistic approach clearly within contemporary psychology and details its continuing applications in the wider field of human flourishing in doing so stephen a joseph offers a critical perspective but ultimately a peaceful synergy between rogers person centered approach and the field of positive psychology the book provides a comprehensive view on why rogers theory matters the challenges in embracing it and how to live the person centered approach in practice the formative tendency i have often pointed out that in my work with individuals in therapy and in my experience in encounter groups i have been led to the conviction that human nature is essentially constructive when in a therapeutic climate which can be objectively defined a person becomes sharply aware of more of his or her internal experiencing and of the stimuli and demands from the external world thus acquiring a full range of options the person tends to move in the direction of becoming a socially constructive organism but many are critical of this point of view why should such a positive direction be observed only in humans isn't this just pure optimism so quite hesitantly because i have to draw on the work and thinking of others rather than on my own experience i should like to try to set this directional tendency in a much broader context i shall draw on my general reading in the field of science but i should like to mention a special indebtedness to the work of lance lot whyte in the universe of experience harper and row 1974 the last book he wrote before his death though the book has flaws in my judgment this historian has some thought provoking themes to advance i have learned from many others as well elkins a long time leading voice in humanistic psychology presents a compelling case about what is wrong with contemporary psychotherapy and how through a re envisioned humanistic psychology it needs to change this intellectual history narrates the institutionalization of the humanistic current in american psychology and places the thinking of five of its founders gordon allport abraham maslow carl rogers rollo may and james bugental in the context of twentieth century psychology the founders of humanistic psychology is the first historical and systematic presentation of humanistic psychology it is also the only study that treats these five thinkers as a unit and places them in the context of history and systems of western psychology roy jose decarvalho begins with a discussion of the political institutions that brought this movement together research facilities grants and intellectual stimulation via seminars conferences and journals the text then introduces the biographies of allport maslow rogers may and bugental following chapters detail the shared views of these five founders with emphasis on the philosophical encounter of humanistic psychology with behaviorism psychoanalysis and existentialism decarvalho also examines the impact that the neo freudians kurt goldstein and personality and gestalt psychologies had on the conceptualization of their humanistic psychology the methodology views on human nature and the ethics of humanistic psychology are also discussed ending with a chronological bibliography of each founder of the movement this book is a valuable research tool for humanistic psychologists as well as graduate and undergraduate students social workers and psychologists as well as historians and philosophers of the social sciences will also find this an indispensable source of information about the rise of the humanistic movement this is a practical description of the form of therapy generally known as humanistic based on the human potential movement of the sixties and seventies which now incorporates a number of related methods it outlines the background and history of this approach the main figures who were responsible for the formation of its ideas and practice and the present place it has in the field of psychotherapy there is a section in which therapists from differing backgrounds express their own views of their work and how they apply this in their relationship with their clients the book closes with a discussion of the main issues facing humanistic psychotherapy
