and mites are the most important pests of citrus trees in california on account of their small size and because the foliage and fruit of the tree are not conspicuously marred either by their presence or by the covering of sooty mold fungus as is the case with some of the scale insects the actual injury done by red spiders and mites is not always appreciated their distribution is very general over the citrus sections and they may be found in some numbers at most any season of the year so long as they do not become numerous the injury they do is not important and in such cases it is not good economy to apply treatment because of their more or less continual presence in scattering numbers some growers take red spiders as a matter of course and fail to recognize their importance when they become abundant and do damage or come to a realization of their injurious nature after most of the damage has been done and the spiders themselves begin to disappear as they often do while therefore the presence of spiders in scattering numbers should be the cause of no particular concern the presence of excessive numbers of spiders should be the cause of enough concern for the grower to start immediately to apply control measures dropping of the leaves and fruit is the ultimate result of red spider injury but the cause should be checked long before this extreme effect is evident about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
