an exploration of the early service of germany s fw 190 containing a unique collection of rare photos displaying the wide use of this aircraft widely regarded as the luftwaffe s finest fighter the focke wulf fw 190 first saw service in france in august 1941 immediately proving itself at least the equal of the then latest spitfire variant the mk v in this volume chris goss takes a close look at the aircraft s features as well as its early history there were a number of characteristics which contributed to the fw 190 s success for instance it was designed as a weapons platform and built to withstand heavy punishment another element in the fw 190's construction which added to its durability was its wide tracked inwards retracting landing gear the fw 190's BMW 801 D 2 radial engine also produced 1 677 horsepower giving the early Focke Wulf 190 A 8 a top speed of more than 400 miles per hour which was considerably faster than the early variant Spitfires as Goss points out it was the Spitfires with which the fw 190 pilots frequently had to contend when in combat over the English Channel and particularly during the Allied raid on Dieppe in August 1942 the fw 190's weapons capability also saw it used as a fighter bomber against Allied shipping in the Channel and against the southeastern coasts of England in 1942 in tip and runs raids these fast low level attacks proved difficult for the defending RAF squadrons to counter and only one fw 190 was lost on these operations in this first of two volumes Goss examines the aircraft's features and early days showing exactly why it was the workhorse of the Luftwaffe using official German records logbooks and personal accounts the authors tell the little known story of this rugged fighter's service in Tunisia in the fighter and ground attack role and assess its technical and military performance in the final years of the war as the war began to turn against germany the luftwaffe was forced to defend the reich against increasingly overwhelming numbers of allied fighters and bombers the focke wulf fw 190 together with the bf 109g was the mainstay of the luftwaffe s reichsverteidigung defence of the reich fighter force both by day and by night as the war progressed the us eighth air force suffering heavy losses over germany changed tactics the escorting us fighters had been expected to fly alongside the bombers to provide close protection but this meant that they could not chase after the enemy when in combat having to return to the bombers so from early 1944 the decision was made to free the fighters allowing them to fly ahead of the bomber stream clearing the skies of german fighters to counter this the luftwaffe developed the gefechtsverband or battle formation composed of two units of bf 109s and one sturmgruppe of fw 190s in gefechtsverband operations the bf 109s would engage the allied fighters particularly the long range p 51 mustangs leaving the more heavily armed fw 190s to attack the bombers though the large gefechtsverband formations were unweildy and not always effective when they did work well the powerful and well armored fw 190s wreaked havoc amongst the us bombers meanwhile on the eastern front the fw 190 was increasaingly relied upon for fighter and jabo missions against a dogged soviet air force with the tide well and truly turned against the luftwaffe newer versions of the fw 190 such as the f and g variants were intruduced as well as the superlative d 9 which was powered by the jumo 213 a engine armed with two mg 131s and two mg 151 20 guns and had a new fuselage and wings in this second volume detailing the service of the fw 190 chris goss has assembled photographs many of which have come from the archive of the late dr alfred price to illustrate the final years of the type s w
