since the 1970s various sociological approaches have tried to understand and conceptualize the global yet few of them have systematically addressed the full spectrum of social relationships prominent exponents of the global approach such as world systems analysis instead have focused on particular domains such as politics or the economy under the label of world society however some authors have suggested alternatives to the predominant equivocation of society and the nation state the contributions to this volume share that objective and take their point of departure from the two most ambitious projects of a theory of world society world polity research and systems theory mapping out the common ground and assessing their potential to inform empirical analyses of globalization emerging traits of late global modernity such as transnationalism multiculturalism individualization and supranational contexts of action raise the question of what holds society together responses have typically made reference to legitimization but the modern world presents challenges to such responses for in such a differentiated globalized setting legitimization can no longer appeal to the previous national ideological or religious foundations of early modernity from a variety of theoretical and empirical perspectives this book explores the manner in which legitimization can be constructed by people groups or institutions under the contemporary pressures and possibilities of modern world society drawing on cosmopolitan theory postcolonial sociology systems theory and historical sociology it engages with questions of human rights processes of individualization and the constitution of transnational spaces in its examination of the challenges to legitimization as such it will be of interest to scholars of sociology political science and social and legal theory concerned with questions of globalization and the problems of social cohesion and legitimacy
