the proposal of a semantics for quotations using explanatory notions drawn from philosophical theories of pictures in quotations as pictures josef stern develops a semantics for quotations using explanatory notions drawn from philosophical theories of pictures he offers the first sustained analysis of the practice of quotation proper as opposed to mentioning unlike other accounts that treat quotation as mentioning quotations as pictures argues that the two practices have independent histories that they behave differently semantically that the inverted commas employed in both mentioning and quotation are homonymous that so called mixed quotation is nothing but subsentential quotation and that the major problem of quotation is to explain its dual reference or meaning its ordinary meaning and its metalinguistic reference to the quoted phrase attributed to the quoted subject stern argues that the key to understanding quotation is the idea that quotations are pictures or have a pictorial character as a phenomenon where linguistic competence meets a nonlinguistic symbolic ability the pictorial quotation is a combination of features drawn from the two different symbol systems of language and pictures which explains the exceptional and sometimes idiosyncratic data about quotation in light of this analysis of verbal quotation in the last chapters stern analyzes scare quotation as a nonliteral expressive use of the inverted commas and explores the possibility of quotation in pictures themselves the first lessons we learn in school can stay with us all our lives but this was nowhere more true than in the last decades of the fourteenth century when grammar school students were not only learning to read and write but understanding for the first time that their mother tongue english was grammatical the efflorescence of ricardian poetry was not a direct result of this change but it was everywhere shaped by it this book characterizes this close connection between literacy training and literature as it is manifest in the fine and ambitious poetry by gower langland and chaucer at this transitional moment this is also a book about the way medieval training in grammar or grammatica shaped the poetic arts in the middle ages fully as much as rhetorical training it answers the curious question of what language was used to teach latin grammar to the illiterate it reveals for the first time what the surviving schoolbooks from the period actually contain it describes what form a grammar school took in a period from which no school buildings or detailed descriptions survive and it scrutinizes the processes of elementary learning with sufficient care to show that for the grown medieval schoolboy well learned books functioned not only as a touchstone for wisdom but as a knowledge so personal and familiar that it was equivalent to what we would now call experience this volume presents a cross linguistic investigation of clausal noun modifying constructions in genetically varied languages of eurasia contrary to a common premise that in any language adnominal clauses that share some features of relative clauses constitute a structurally distinct construction some languages of eurasia exhibit a general noun modifying clause construction gnmcc a single construction covering a wide range of semantic relations between the head noun and the clause through in depth examination of naturally occurring and elicited data from ainu languages of the caucasus e g ingush georgian bezhta hinuq japanese korean marathi nenets sino tibetan languages e g cantonese mandarin rawang and turkic languages e g turkish sakha the chapters discuss whether or not the language in question exhibits a gnmcc and the range of noun modification covered by such a construction the findings afford us new facts new theoretical perspectives and the first step toward a more global assessment of the possibilities for gnmccs in this book a novel approach that combines speech based emotion recognition with adaptive human computer dialogue modeling is described with the robust recognition of emotions from speech signals as their goal the authors analyze the effectiveness of using a plain emotion recognizer a speech emotion recognizer combining speech and emotion recognition and multiple speech emotion recognizers at the same time the semi stochastic dialogue model employed relates user emotion management to the corresponding dialogue interaction history and allows the device to adapt itself to the context including altering the stylistic realization of its speech this comprehensive volume begins by introducing spoken language dialogue systems and providing an overview of human emotions theories categorization and emotional speech it moves on to cover the adaptive semi stochastic dialogue model and the basic concepts of speech emotion recognition finally the authors show how speech emotion recognizers can be optimized and how an adaptive dialogue manager can be implemented the book with its novel methods to perform robust speech based emotion recognition at low complexity will be of interest to a variety of readers involved in human computer interaction this is a collection of state of the art papers in the field of syntactic reconstruction it treats a range of topics which are representative of current debates in historical syntax the novelty and merit of the present book is the editors believe that in contrast to most previous work on diachronic syntax it combines the perspectives of the traditional philological research on syntactic reconstruction with the insights of modern syntactic theory as it is emphasised in the foreword by giuseppe longobardi the volume includes articles by well recognized researchers in historical linguistics with a focus on syntactic change in the present volume syntactic reconstruction is discussed from a variety of angles including historical linguistics phenomena of language contact generative approaches as well as typological and variationist research in the articles languages from a diverse range of families are discussed including indo european north and south caucasian sino tibetan and turkic tommo so is a dogon language with approximately 60 000 speakers in mali west africa as only the second full grammatical description of a dogon language this volume is a critical resource for solving the mystery of dogon s genetic affiliation with other languages in africa tommo so is an sov language with isolating nominal morphology and agglutinative verbal morphology suffixes on the verb mark tense aspect negation as well as subject agreement the phonology is sensitive to levels of verbal morphology in that variable vowel harmony applies less frequently as one moves to outer layers of the morphology the tone system of tomo so is of typological interest in both its phonological and syntactic instantiations phonologically it is a two tone system of h and l but these specified tones contrast with a surface underspecified tone grammatically the lexical tone of a word is often overwritten by syntactically induced overlays for example an inalienable noun s tone will be replaced with l if it is possessed by a non pronominal possessor and by either h or hl if the possessor is pronominal the language has also innovated a series of locative quasi verbs and focus particles sensitive to pragmatic factors like certainty
