first used to describe the weariness the public felt toward media portrayals of societal crises the term compassion fatigue has been taken up by health professionals to name along with burnout vicarious traumatization compassion stress and secondary traumatic stress the condition of caregivers who become too tired to care compassion long seen as the foundation of ethical caring is increasingly understood as a threat to the well being of those who offer it through the lens of hermeneutic phenomenology the authors present an insider s perspective on compassion fatigue its effects on the body on the experience of time and space and on personal and professional relationships accounts of health professionals alongside examinations of poetry images movies and literature are used to explore the notions of compassion hope and hopelessness as they inform the meaning of caring work the authors frame their exposé of compassion fatigue with the very canadian metaphor of lying down in the snow if suffering is imagined as ever falling snow then the need for training and resources for safe journeying in winter country becomes apparent recognizing the phenomenon of compassion fatigue reveals the role that health services education and the moral habitability of our healthcare environments play in supporting professionals ability to act compassionately and to endure the night represents almost universally a special liminal or out of the ordinary temporal zone with its own meanings possibilities and dangers and political cultural religious and social implications only in the modern era was the night systematically colonised and nocturnal activity normalised in terms of industrial labour and production processes although the globalised 24/7 economy is usually seen as the outcome of capitalist modernisation development and expansion starting in the late nineteenth century other consecutive and more recent political and economic systems adopted perpetual production systems as well extending work into the night and forcing workers to work the night shift normalising it as part of an alternative non capitalist modernity this volume draws attention to the extended work hours and night shift work which have remained underexplored in the history of labour and the social science literature by describing and comparing various political and economic regimes it argues that from the viewpoint of global labour history night labour and the spread of 24/7 production and services should not be seen only and exclusively as an epiphenomenon of capitalist production but rather as one of the outcomes of industrial modernity while the arab revolutions have obviously triggered extensive social and political changes the far reaching consequences of the cultural and discursive changes have yet to be adequately considered for activists researchers and journalists the revolution was primarily a revolution in language a break with the linguistic oppression and the rigidity of the old regimes this break was accompanied by the emergence of new languages which made it possible to inform tell and translate the ongoing events and transformations this language of the revolution was carried out into the world by competing voices from syria by local and foreign researchers activists and journalists the core of this project is to find the various translations of the language of the syrian revolution 2011 2012 from arabic to english to study and analyze in addition the discursive and non discursive dimensions of the revolution are to be seen as another act of translation including the language of the banners slogans graffiti songs and their representation in english
