in no place for ethics hill argues that contemporary judicial review by the u s supreme court rests on its mistaken positivist understanding of law law simply because so ordered as something separate from ethics further to assert any relation between the two is to contaminate both either by turning law into an arm of ethics or by making ethics an expression of law this legal positivism was on full display recently when the supreme court declared that the cdc was acting unlawfully by extending the eviction moratorium to contain the spread of the covid 19 delta variant something that the court admitted was of indisputable benefit to the public how mistaken however to think that acting for the good of the public is to act unlawfully when actually it is to act ethically and must therefore be lawful to address this mistake hill contends that an understanding of natural law theory provides the basis for a constitutive relation between ethics and law without confusing their distinct role in answering the basic question how should i behave in society to secure that relation the court has an overriding responsibility when carrying out its review to do so with reference to normative ethics from which the u s constitution is derived and to which it is accountable while the constitution confirms for example the liberty interests of individuals it does not originate those interests which have their origin in human rights that long preceded it essential to this argument is an appreciation of ethics as objective and based on principles like those of justice truth and reason that ought to inform human behavior at its very springs applied in an analysis of five major supreme court cases this appreciation of ethics reveals how wrongly decided these cases are
