this book revisits the arguments by which harvey sacks and harold garfinkel opposed the widespread attempt in the social sciences to construct disciplinary theories and methods in place of common sense knowledge of human action and proposed instead an alternative that would investigate the organised methods of natural language use and common sense reasoning that constitute social orders arguments that led to the establishment and proliferation of ethnomethodology and conversation analysis as the very constructive analysis that they opposed has begun to be incorporated into influential lines of research in ethnomethodology and conversation analysis the authors return to the founding insights of the field and reiterate the importance of garfinkel and sacks original and controversial proposals for an alternate sociology of practical action and practical reasoning showing how constructive analysis has become entrenched in ethnomethodology and conversation analysis and arguing for a need to re boot these approaches this volume constitutes a call for a renewal of the radical alternative proposed by garfinkel and sacks

this volume explores a rich variety of linkages between grammar and social interaction in this book sixteen international scholars of language and social interaction describe their distinct frameworks of analysis taking conversation analysis and interactional sociolinguistics as their points of departure and investigating ordinary conversation as well as institutions such as health care therapy and city council meetings they often incorporate gesture prosody and the listener's behavior in the analysis of talk while some approaches are grounded in a critique of the major schools of interaction analysis others integrate the interactionist perspective with ideas from fields such as systemic functional linguistics distributed cognition and the sociology of knowledge each chapter combines a statement of the terms and methods of analysis with an exemplary analysis of a moment of interaction new adventures in language and interaction gives an excellent overview of the novelty and diversity of interaction focused perspectives on language and of the heterogeneity of approaches that have evolved from the pioneering work of Sacks and Schegloff Gumperz and their co-workers the handbook of Korean linguistics presents state of the art overviews of the linguistic research on the Korean language structured to allow a range of theoretical perspectives in addressing linguistic phenomena includes chapters on Old Korean and Middle Korean present day language policies in North and South Korea social aspects of Korean as a heritage language and honorifics indispensable and unique resource not only for those studying Korean linguistics but cross linguistic research in general this edited book revisits the concept of social activities from an interactional perspective examining how verbal vocal visual spatial and material resources are deployed by participants for meaning making in social encounters the eleven original chapters within this volume analyse activities based on video recordings of naturalistic and naturally occurring social encounters from face to face and mediated settings in Chinese Dutch English French and German informed primarily by the methodological approaches of conversation analysis and interactional linguistics the authors study embodiment in space and time in three distinct types of situations objects in space complex participation frameworks and affiliation and alignment moreover the book includes a theoretical and methodological discussion of how activities are constituted and visibly embodied in interaction it will be of interest to students and scholars in sociology and linguistics in general and face to face and mediated interaction in particular ethnomethodology and conversation analysis have made major inroads into the disciplines that make up the social sciences although commonly run together under the title of EMCA what their relationship is to one another remains as elusive as the relationship between their respective founders Harold Garfinkel and Harvey Sacks this book clarifies the nature of these relationships demonstrating that Harvey Sacks' studies of the sequential organisation of conversation are the cardinal example of what Garfinkel described as an ethnomethodological alternative to traditional social science however over the decades that have passed since Garfinkel developed ethnomethodology several confusions have arisen as to what he meant the author argues that these have resulted in a blunting of Garfinkel's original intentions which compromise the adequacy of ethnomethodological description in response this book shows how sacks considerations of adequacy can ground ethnomethodology as a natural observational science that redirects it towards developing further coherent and precisely circumscribed bodies of work to those of sacks own coherent and precisely circumscribed studies it will appeal to both new and existing scholars of ethnomethodology and conversation analysis as well as those with interests in social theory methodology and those who have taken up the relevance of conversation analysis for their research and are interested in the ethnomethodological heritage of conversation analysis
