van der graaf researches the emotional ties of residents to their deprived neighbourhood in transforming deprived areas into great places to live much attention has been given to the physical social and economical aspects of deprivation however little is known about the relationship between deprivation and emotional ties what makes residents in deprived areas feel at home in their neighbourhood in this phd thesis peter van der graaf focused on the emotional ties of residents to their neighbourhood and researched how these ties are affected by urban renewal he also compares practices between the netherlands and the united kingdom where the emotions of residents are considered more in urban renewal an essay collection exploring the board game s relationship to the built environment revealing the unexpected ways that play reflects perceptions of space board games harness the creation of entirely new worlds from the medieval warlord to the modern urban planner players are permitted to inhabit a staggering variety of roles and are prompted to incorporate preexisting notions of placemaking into their decisions to what extent do board games represent the social context of their production how might they reinforce or subvert normative ideas of community and fulfillment in playing place chad randl and d medina lasansky have curated a collection of thirty seven fascinating essays supplemented by a rich trove of photo illustrations that unpack these questions with breadth and care although board games are often recreational objects their mythologies and infrastructure do not exist in a vacuum rather they echo and reproduce prevalent cultural landscapes this thesis forms the throughline of pieces reflecting on subjects as diverse as the rigidly gendered fantasies of classic mass market games the imperial convictions embedded in games that position player protagonists as conquerors establishing dominion over their discoveries and even the uncanny prescience of games that have players responding to a global pandemic representing a thrilling convergence of historiography architectural history and media studies scholarship playing place suggests not only that tabletop games should be taken seriously but also that the medium itself is uniquely capable of facilitating our critical consideration of structures that are often taken for granted the people place and space reader brings together the writings of scholars designers and activists from a variety of fields to make sense of the makings and meanings of the world we inhabit they help us to understand the relationships between people and the environment at all scales and to consider the active roles individuals groups and social structures play in creating the environments in which people live work and play these readings highlight the ways in which space and place are produced through large and small scale social political and economic practices and offer new ways to think about how people engage the environment in multiple and diverse ways providing an essential resource for students of urban studies geography sociology and many other areas this book brings together important but till now widely dispersed writings across many inter related disciplines introductions from the editors precede each section introducing the texts demonstrating their significance and outlining the key issues surrounding the topic a companion website peopleplacespace org extends the work even further by providing an on going series of additional reading lists that cover issues ranging from food security to foreclosure psychiatric spaces to the environments of predator animals placing memory and remembering place in canada maps a fascinating terrain in memory studies by shifting the focus from nation and empire to local places that sit at the intersection of memory making and identity formation main streets city squares village museums internment camps industrial wastelands and the rural landscape while offering a unique perspective on the politics of place and memory across differing chronologies and geographies the first part of the book commemorations traces how local expressions of memory such as celebrations museums statues postcards and plaques have contributed to a sense of place and belonging in twentieth century canada the second part inscriptions in turn explores how ordinary canadians have embedded their memories of place in oral stories photographs and the landscape itself with its focus on the materiality of image text and artefact these essays argue for an understanding of place as imagined made claimed fought for and defended always in a state of becoming in this groundbreaking anthology twenty two artists architects historians critics curators and philosophers explore the role of public art in creating a national identity contending that each work can only be understood by analyzing the context in which it is commissioned built and received they emphasize the historical continuum between traditional works such as mount rushmore the washington monument and the new york public library lions in addition to contemporary memorials such as the vietnam veterans memorial and the names project aids quilt they discuss the influence of patronage on form and content isolate the factors that precipitate controversy and show how public art overtly and covertly conveys civic values and national culture complete with an updated introduction critical issues in public art shows how monuments murals memorials and sculptures in public places are complex cultural achievements that must speak to increasingly diverse groups rethinking place through literary form regards the relationship between place and linguistic form as challenging real and perceived configurations of place and renegotiating geopolitically determined categories of the centre and periphery the volume argues that the rise of scattered communities displaced physically and psychologically by urban and alienated geographies necessitates linguistic negotiations of one's locatedness in place as the chief means of uncovering and rebuilding identity by looking at narrative reimaginings of forgotten and interrupted intimacies between habitation and place from diverse parts of the world the twelve chapters address the growing need to expand and alter approaches to literary representations of modernity and modes of self location

paul newland's illuminating study explores the ways in which london's east end has been constituted in a wide variety of texts films novels poetry television shows newspapers and journals newland argues that an idea or image of the east end which developed during the late nineteenth century continues to function in the twenty first century as an imaginative space in which continuing anxieties continue to be worked through concerning material progress and modernity rationality and irrationality ethnicity and otherness class and its related systems of behaviour the cultural construction of london's east end offers detailed examinations of the ways in which the east end has been constructed in a range of texts including bbc television's eastenders monica ali's brick lane walter besant's all sorts and conditions of men thomas burke's limehouse nights peter ackroyd's hawksmoor films such as piccadilly sparrows can't sing the long good friday from hell the elephant man and spider and in the work of iain sinclair the power of culture in city planning focuses on human diversity strengths needs and ways of living together in geographic communities the book turns attention to the anthropological definition of culture encouraging planners in both urban and cultural planning to focus on characteristics of humanity in all their variety it calls for a paradigm shift re positioning city planners base maps to start with a richer understanding of human cultures borror argues for cultural master plans in parallel to transportation housing parks and other specialized plans while also changing the approach of city comprehensive planning to put people or users first rather than land uses as does the dominant practice cultural plans as currently conceived are not sufficient to help cities keep pace with dizzying impacts of globalization immigration and rapidly changing cultural interests cultural planners need to up their game and enriching their own and city planners cultural competencies is only one step both planning practices have much to learn from one another and already overlap in more ways than most recognize this book highlights some of the strengths of the lesser known practice of cultural planning to help forge greater understanding and collaboration between the two practices empowering city planners with new tools to bring about more equitable communities this will be an important resource for students teachers and practitioners of city and cultural planning as well as municipal policymakers of all stripes this extraordinary text for undergraduate urban students is a reflection of mark hutter's academic interests in urban sociology and his life long passion for experiencing city life his deep academic roots in the chicago school of sociology help inform and appreciate the variety of urban structures and processes and their effect on the everyday lives of people living in cities this text however extends the chicago school perspective by combining its traditions with a social psychological perspective derived from symbolic interaction and also with a macro level examination of social organization social change stratification and power in the urban context informed by political economy this entirely new 3rd edition has a global outlook on city life and a visual presentation unmatched among books in this genre in the wake of the great recession american cities from philadelphia to san diego saw an upsurge in hyperlocal placemaking small scale interventions aimed at encouraging greater equity and community engagement in growth and renewal but the projects that were the most successful at achieving these lofty ambitions weren't usually established by politicians urban planners or real estate developers they were initiated by community activists artists and neighbors in order to figure out why the city creative mounts a comprehensive study of placemaking in urban america tracing its intellectual history and contrasting it with the efforts of people making positive change in their communities today spanning the 1950s to the post recession 2010s the city creative highlights the roles of such prominent individuals and organizations as jane jacobs christopher alexander richard sennett project for public spaces and the national endowment for the arts in the development of urban placemaking both in the abstract and on the ground but that's only half the story bringing the narrative to the present michael h carriere and david schalliol also detail placemaking interventions at more than 200 sites in more than 40 cities combining archival research interviews participant observation and schalliol's powerful documentary photography carriere and schalliol find that while these formal and informal placemaking interventions can bridge local community development and regional economic plans more often than not they push the boundaries of mainstream placemaking rather than simply stressing sociability or market driven economic development these initiatives offer an alternative model of community led progress with the potential to redistribute valuable resources while producing tangible and intangible benefits for their communities the city creative provides a kaleidoscopic overview of how these initiatives grow and sometimes collapse illustrating the centrality of placemaking in the evolution of the american city and how it can be reoriented to meet demands for a more equitable future recognised by the un's sustainable development goals as a measure to make cities inclusive safe and resilient conservation of natural and cultural heritage has become an increasingly important issue across the globe the equity principle of sustainable development necessitates that citizens hold the right to participate in the cultural economy of a place requiring that inhabitants and other stakeholders are consulted on processes of continuity or transformation however aspirations of cultural exchange do not translate in practice equity in heritage conservation takes the unesco world heritage city of ahmedabad india as the foundational investigation into the realities of cultural heritage conservation and management it contextualises the question of heritage by citing places projects and initiatives from other cities around the world to identify issues processes and improvements through illustrated chapters it discusses the understanding of heritage in relation to the sustainable development of living historic cities the viability of specific measures ethics of engagement and recommendations for governance this book will appeal to a range of scholars interested in cultural heritage conservation and management sustainable development urban and regional planning and architecture literature images and metaphor are often where most of a nation's history are embedded a study of modern kurdish literature highlights a fealty to a rich literary past and a rich source of historiography the articles in this volume address many facets of the literary in the kurdish world proverbs feminist literature and resistance in literary works poetry prose etc in the end the volume offers a general paradigm of the complex literary framework of the kurds their continuous resistance for nationhood in their history and their modern reinventing of the self an overview of some of the works in modern kurdish literature points to both asymmetry and commonality in comparative literary studies these works highlight the thematic reach in kurdish literary studies in the empty place democracy and public space teresa hoskyns explores the relationship of public space to democracy by relating different theories of democracy in political philosophy to spatial theory and spatial and political practice establishing the theoretical basis for the study of public space hoskyns examines the rise of representative democracy and investigates contemporary theories for the future of democracy focusing on the chantal mouffe s agonistic model and the civil society model of jürgen habermas she argues that these models of participatory democracy can co exist and are necessarily spatial the book then provides diverse perspectives on how the role of physical public space is articulated through three modes of participatory spatial practice the first focuses on issues of participation in architectural practice through a set of projects exploring the open spaces of a postwar housing estate in euston the second examines the role of space in the construction of democratic identity through a feminist architecture art collective producing space through writing performance and events the third explores participatory political democratic practice through social forums at global european and city levels hoskyns concludes that participatory democracy requires a conception of public space as the empty place allowing different models and practices of democracy to co exist
